

Monkey Crush

Part of
The Crush Series

This book belongs to:

A monkey sat at the top of a tree,
he wanted something to eat.
He had seen a coconut hanging up there
and fancied it as a treat.

But the coconut was happy with life,
it didn't want to fall.
So the monkey shook the coconut tree,
but he was only small.

Half way up that very same tree
a tiger was having a rest.
He dreamt of catching that very small monkey,
as small ones tasted the best.

He knew, if quiet, he would catch his meal,
but he had to be quite quick.

So he climbed the tree without any noise,
as that was a tiger's trick.

A hunter was tracking a tiger so large,
he couldn't believe his eyes.
He wanted to catch it for its lovely soft skin,
which really wasn't so wise.