

Toby and the Ice Giants

Joe Lillington

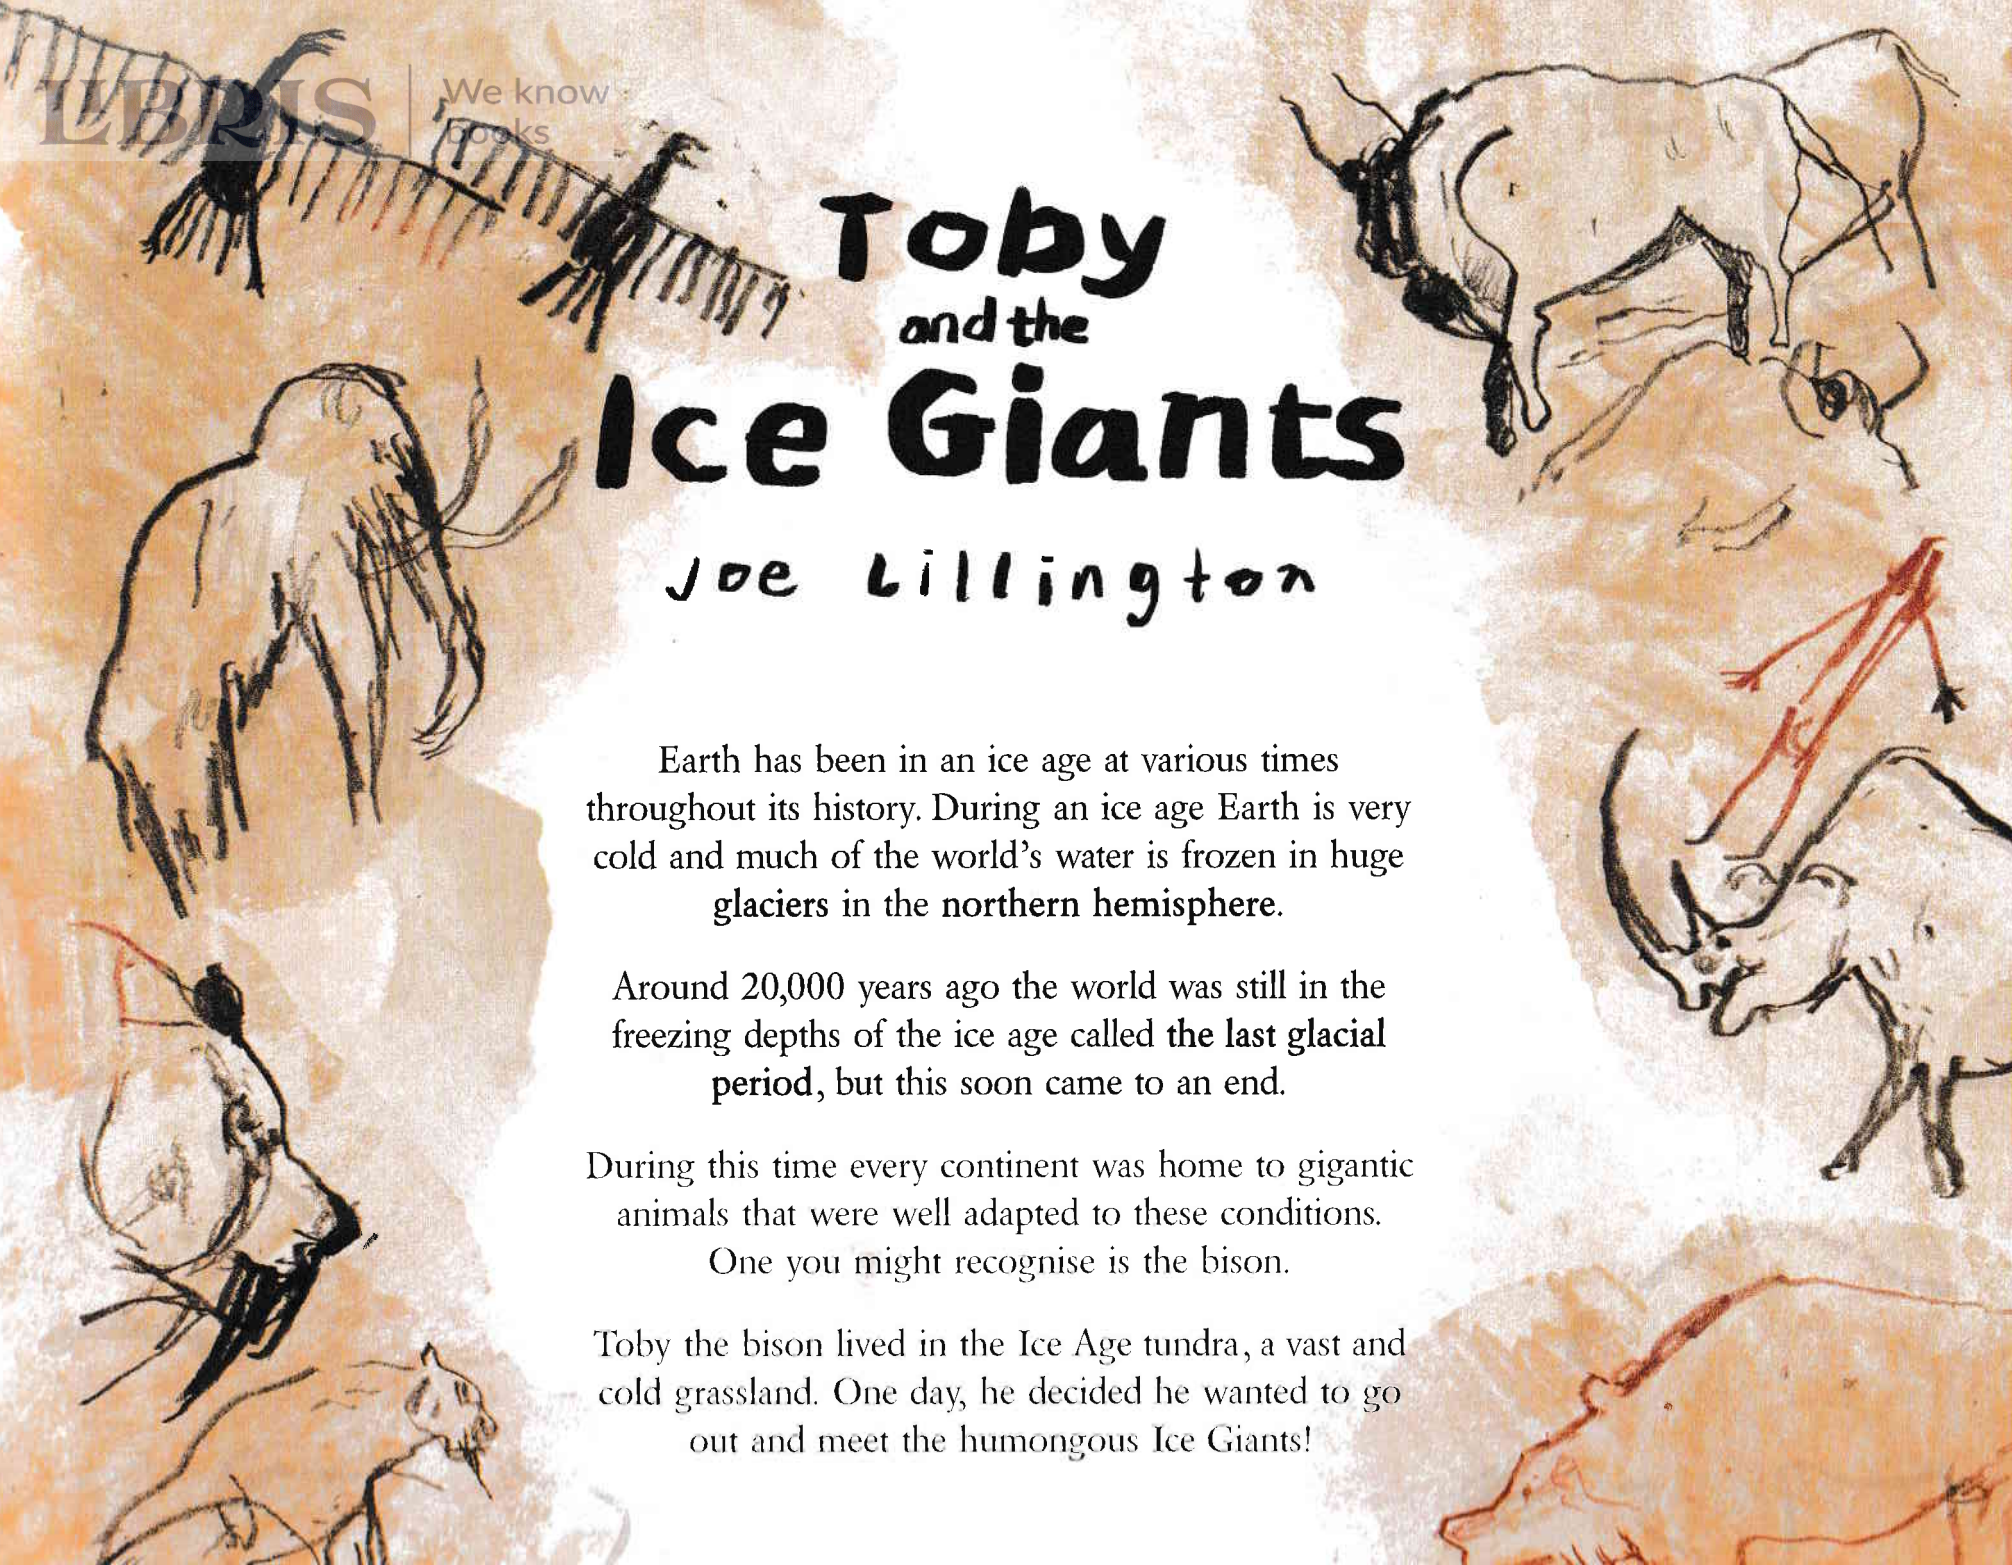

Earth has been in an ice age at various times throughout its history. During an ice age Earth is very cold and much of the world's water is frozen in huge glaciers in the northern hemisphere.

Around 20,000 years ago the world was still in the freezing depths of the ice age called the last glacial period, but this soon came to an end.

During this time every continent was home to gigantic animals that were well adapted to these conditions.

One you might recognise is the bison.

Toby the bison lived in the Ice Age tundra, a vast and cold grassland. One day, he decided he wanted to go out and meet the humongous Ice Giants!

"Don't go too far!"

"I'm big now.
I'm not scared!"
said Toby, as he scampered away.

But before he could get very far he bumped into something very hard.

*“OUCH!
Watch where you’re going!”*
