Underneath the root of the biggest fir-tree in the forest was a sandy burrow. Peter Rabbit lived there with his mother and sisters.

One wintry afternoon, Mrs. Rabbit sent Peter out to collect firewood. “Stay close to home, dear,” she said. “And look out for Mr. Tod.”

Peter nodded and ran off into the forest.

Among the trees, Peter met his cousin Benjamin walking with his father, old Mr. Benjamin Bunny.

“Can I help Peter collect firewood, Father?” Benjamin asked.

“Very well,” said old Mr. Bunny. “But don’t stray too far. They say Mr. Tod is about.”

Needless to say, neither Peter nor Benjamin paid any attention to their parents’ advice.
